REINCARNATION.

Her lustrous eyes, with their southern heat,
Look indifference into mine,
And my pulses race with a fiercer beat
'Neath her maddening smile divine!

An icy chill in her sphinxlike glance
Seals forever my hopeless woe,
I my future staked on a loser's chance,
And her only word was "No!"

In some other world, in an age outgrown—
Say a million of years ago—
We two must have loved as I now, alone,
While I never then told her so!
—Clarence Miles Boutelle in Godey's.

AN AFTERNOON CALL.

My mother's illness had kept us home for months, but she was better and beginning again to take interest in magazines and newspapers. In one of the latter she discovered this item:

"Miss Marian Ross arrived Saturday from Sparkling Springs, Va. She leaves next week for Bar Harbor and other gay centers."

"Go over and call," said my mother; "perhaps she will give you a whiff of the ocean."

Before I could demur she had rung for George to bring around the cart and ordered me out of the house.

I chose a short cut to Ross hill, a country road bordered breast high with blackberry and elder bushes. There was much up hill and down dale work and many a loose stone over which to stumble, but the pony was fresh, trees shaded the road, wild grapevines waved their sprays in our faces, and an occasional breeze wafted us the fragrance of the elder blossoms.

Crossing a bridge and looking down through the tree tops to the creek far below I could see the cattle drinking—velvet skinned Alderneys, whose graceful limbs showed pedigree in every line. Skirting the base of Rose hill we turned into the avenue and climbed toward the gates, which formed a crescent and swung from huge stone pillars almost hidden by woodbine.

The gates barred entrance to the driveway; otherwise the place was not inclosed by wall or hedge—the great green hill stretched away in its beauty for every one to see. A rustic seat was placed hospitably on the boulevard that even a stranger might tarry and enjoy the view far away over the hill and valley to that line of misty blue which marks the end of vision. On my way to the house I espied a hammock under the willow trees down by the spring. Surely a white dress was fluttering from it. Bidding pony stand I ran down the hill, to be received literally with open arms.

"My dear Harriet, how did you divine that I was longing for you? But I did not like to add myself to your burdens. I am so depressing."

"Oh, but my mother is better, and besides I am always glad to see you."

"I am so tired of myself that I feel as if every one else must be tired of me too. I was even grateful to my horse for seeming glad to welcome me home. We are no match for dumb brutes in affection. We chatter away all our best qualities, our affection and earnestness, and—that reminds me, you were not at church yesterday. I was. I sat in the pew between the two doors, where the breeze could fan me and the green trees look in at me (there were very few other spectators).

"The yellow windows were framed by the shadow of the ivy on the outside, and the choir boys sang like birds. The sermon was so good—all about—oh, I forget what it was about, except that he said the word translated 'good' means earnest—to be good is to be earnest. I was afraid before that I never could be good, but now I am in despair. I never realized how frivolous I was until Maud married. She was always serious enough for both of us."

We were sitting in the hammock, which vibrated slowly, encouraged by an occasional touch of her white slippered foot on the turf. Before us the spring trickled from the earth and ran away a tiny thread of silver, just water enough to keep the pebbles glistening and to give drink to the ferns which leaned over it. I congratulated Marian on the luxuriance of the green fronds, knowing that the sisters were fond of them, as they had been gathering them for years on their travels, and each fern had its pleasant reminiscences.

"Now," said Marian, "there is an instance of how serious Maud is. It would break her heart to know that she had half the associations attached to the wrong ferns, but it only makes me laugh when she hangs the California story on a fern I know we brought from the Virginia mountains, or when she tells how she dug that one in an old churchyard in Morristown, N. J., near Washington's headquarters, when Aunt Letty herself identified it as one she sent us from Illinois, from the banks of the Sangamon.

"Didn't Lincoln wade or fish or something in the Sangamon? Yet I believe Maud is happier than I am; at least I am sure there is something lacking in me now that she is married. After one has owned a sister so long it is hard to have some man with no claim at all come and carry her off. Whatever she has had I have always had, until now she has a husband and I have none—not that I want one, but she might have waited.

"Since we were little girls we had planned that if ever there was a wedding in the house it should be a double one, but when I reminded her she laughed at the idea, said waiting for me was hopeless; that such an indecisive person as I wouldn't know my fate when I saw him. Then I couldn't help saying that if my fate expected me to recognize him he would certainly have to be handsomer than her Henry. Of course there was a quarrel, and after that I dared not suspect even in my own mind that Henry was not an Apollo, and if I was exhausted in preparing for the wedding I was afraid to heave a sigh.

"I just fastened a smile on my face and kept it there till all was over. When I took it off after they were gone papa said I looked like a ghost in my own house. He offered to take me somewhere, but I know pleasure resorts are places of martyrdom to him. His idea of recreation is to go fishing with a lot of men and dress like an aborigine. So I told him if he could persuade Miss Brown to be my chaperon she and I would cut a swath. Of course she couldn't leave her sister and the children, but I whirled her off before she had time to resign herself to stay at home.

"When we left we were absolutely lifeless—she with overwork, I with ennui. We went south to the gulf. We were quite too listless to think. If some one would plan out a day, even an hour, for us, we were happy. One of us would say to the other:

"'What are you going to do?'

"'I haven't decided. What will you do?'

"'I haven't made up my mind.'

"'I believe I'll walk on the pier and wait for an idea.'

"'Oh, then, so will I.'

"There were men about too. One—perhaps forty years old—took a fancy to me. They teased me about him, and I hadn't even ambition to retaliate—just let them tease. At first I had a mild intention of transferring him to Miss Brown (they would have made a nice match), but it proved too much trouble. He would do anything for me and nothing for her, and we needed some man to devise amusement and do the talking for us. He tried to make us promise to return some time, although we hadn't spoken of going. He persisted in trying to make us promise, and we were too inert to oppose him. So one day when he was out in a boat we stepped on board a steamboat and went up to North Carolina.

"Beautiful country! Oh, the flowers on the North Carolina hills! I began to appreciate the scenery, and Miss Brown became so sprightly she alarmed me. I told her if she couldn't help growing younger so fast I should have to send home for an older chaperon. Then we drifted about to other places—Sparkling Springs last and longest. We staid at a private hotel—fine old southern house in perfect preservation—magnolias and cape jasmine and pickaninnies. While I think of it let me warn you if you ever go south be careful. You will think every man you meet is in love with you—they are all so devoted.

"There was one man at our hotel. When I say a man I mean one who takes your breath away. There were plenty of apologies for men and several women worth looking at. There was a young widow with a pensive air and a repertory of touching allusions to her dear husband, which were very fetching. She had more men about her than any woman in the house; in fact, she could command all of them except the one I spoke of.

"When I arrived he was dancing a good natured attendance on a young matron unhappily married and exceedingly pretty, infantile type, theatrical tendency to pose. She had wrapped herself about him like a vine and gave him daily bulletins of her troubles. Just think of it! How can a woman? And what did that man do but come and repeat all her confidences to me!

"'Do not tell me,' I would beg. 'I do not care to hear her private affairs.'

"'Neither do I,' he would laugh. 'I think you might share the burden of woe which she thrusts upon me.'

"After I came perhaps he neglected her or broke some of the tendrils she had fastened upon him. It was only natural that he should show me about a little, all the other men being occupied with the widow. He was merely trying to keep me from stagnation, I'm sure. It was absurd for her to grow jealous, but she did, and she a married woman! Visibly jealous! Perfectly preposterous, especially when there was nothing between us. Were only amusing each other; only passing away the time—the days were so long and delightful."

As she spoke she kept nervously twisting a ring which I had never before noticed on her hand.

"When did you get that?" I asked.

"Oh, he gave it to me," smiling.

"So you are engaged. Please tell me what he is like?"

"You shall see for yourself. He said he would come on this winter."

"Then there will be another wedding at Rose Hill?"

"What do you mean?" with arching brows and surprised eyes. "I do not expect him—he said so; that was all."

"You mean that you do not care for him to come?"

To this she would make no reply, only looked at me in a mocking way, and I rose to go. We climbed the hill arm in arm, and I jumped into the cart and was about to touch the pony with the whip when she leaned over, placed her hand on the back of the seat and whispered:

"All that talk about Father Time is a mistake. They ought to say Mother Time. I always knew Time was a woman because—time—will—tell."

She picked up her skirts with one hand, threw me a kiss with the other and ran into the house. My eyes and thoughts followed her until a tug at the reins apprised me that pony had started for home on his own accord, delicately intimating that an afternoon call should end before evening.—Chicago News.

Intelligible Price Marks.

Very few stores now adhere to the old plan of cipher marking. Experience has proved that a majority of customers prefer goods to be marked in plain figures, no one liking the idea of two sets of figures unless he is sure he is among the favored ones who get the benefit of the lower scale. It is said to be the practice with the medical fraternity of some towns to grade their charges to patients according to the style of house in which they live, and the same idea prevails so much as to retail stores that ladies have been known to send servants down to stores because they could get a larger discount.

Other ladies are careful never to dress very well when shopping, and this shows how firmly the impression prevails that a genuine one price store is a novelty. The easiest way to get over this impression is to have every article marked in plain figures, so that the customer may see that one price prevails for all.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

CHANGES IN WORDS.

STRANGE DEPARTURES MADE FROM ORIGINAL MEANINGS.

Many Words Which Today Mean Almost the Opposite of That Which They Stood for Many Years Ago—Here Are a Few Examples of Changes of Meaning.

The word Bible furnishes a striking instance of a word's rise from very low to high estate. To the bulk of English speaking folk it now means the Book of Books. In Chaucer's day it meant any book whatever, or scroll. Tracing the word Bible straight home we find it but another name for the papyrus reed of Egypt. Cancellarius is another word which has risen from humble origin to high rank. Under the early Roman emperors it meant simply doorkeeper, by which token Gibbon speaks of the wrath of the people of Rome when the worthless Emperor Carinus set his low born cancellarius to rule over them. And nowadays the lord high chancellor of England—though shorn of some of the influence he wielded in the days of Thurlow and Eldon—ranks rather higher than a mere doorkeeper. Consul is a word which retains scarce a shred of its olden grandeur. During their year of office Rome's consuls twain ranked above kings, and Cicero's pride in having filled this lofty post seems likely to live forever in that luckless jingle of his:

O fortu natum natum, me consule Romam!

But now nearly every fourth rate town on the face of the globe can boast half a dozen consuls. The Courteney motto 'Quid feci? Ubi lapsus!' might fit not only this poor, degraded word, but the name of Cicero himself, which, under the thin disguise of cicerone, now decks every gabbling guide who hashes names, dates and the queen's English, or whatever may chance to be his mother tongue. Patricius, in its English shape, patrician—unmangled—still keeps some of its old dignity. But, to quote Gibbon, "the meanest subjects of the Roman empire assumed the illustrious title Patricius, which, by the conversion of Ireland, has been communicated to a whole nation." Gibbon—who sometimes fails to make his meaning clear—here means that Ireland's missionary, Succathus by name, received the title Patricius, whence St. Patrick, whence Pat.

See how villanus has sunk. At the outset it meant the worthy hind who tilled the broad acres surrounding a Roman squire's country seat. (For villa—another word which has gone down in the world—originally indicated not a snug suburban dwelling, but demesne as well as mansion.) In the Middle Ages, however, villanus, or villein, came to mean a downtrodden tiller of the soil, who could scarcely call his soul his own, and whose gross ill treatment bore its fruit—gross ill conduct. Hence the rank ill odor in which the once harmless word villain now lies steeped.

Note, too, how sophist has sunk. At its birth sophistes—from sophia, wisdom—meant a wise man. Had it acquired a taint even when Pythagoras eschewed it as too arrogant? Or was it sheer modesty that led him to coin for himself the unpretending word philosophos, lover of wisdom? Anyhow, sophist has sunk so low that it now denotes one skilled in the base art of making the worse appear the better reason. Hypocrite has shared the fate of sophist. Originally the sole and entirely honorable sense of upokreies was actor on the stage—not, as now, an actor off it, a sly sinner feigning himself virtuous. Our word actor—and still more actress—has acquired a kindred taint, not from any fault in those who use the art behind the footlights, but from the frailty of those who abuse it by playing a part on life's stage instead of showing themselves manfully in their true colors.

Cunning has sunk so low that it can scarce sink lower. It now means 'cute, and 'cute bears a perilous resemblance to sharper—which we might define as "one who would deem it an insult to be told that he had missed a chance of duping a flat." Yet knowing—now almost a synonym for sharper, and commonly linked very significantly with card—"He's a knowing card"—originally meant kenning, or crafty in that honorable sense of craft which still lives in craftsman and handicraft. Nay, at root cunning and kenning are one and the same word, of which king itself is but a shortened form.

For our English forefathers—let them be English, not Anglo-Saxon, if only as a tribute to the memory of the great historian so lately lost to us, who spent half a lifetime in trying to teach us that Englishmen are Englishmen, and always have been since first they set foot on British soil—our English forefathers, then, chose for their ruler the most cunning man they could find. And the word king lives on unsullied, as if to point the disgrace of its old yoke mate. The disgrace, however, is of recent date. Could words speak, idiot—which is but Greek docked of its last syllable—might cry with poor Ophelia, "We know what we are; we know not what we may be." It meant a man not clothed with public functions: it means a man unfit for any.

In the "spacious days of great Elizabeth," noise signified a band of music. At least Shakespeare uses the word in that sense. But this pleasing sense it has wholly shed, although, by the bye, the epithet "pleasing" would hardly have passed muster with the late Alexander Dumas, who once defined music as "the costliest of noises." Conceited—like Humpty Dumpty—has had a great fall, and clerk a slight one. We can hardly refrain from smiling when Chaucer dubs the great blind Maeonides "that conceited clerk Homere"—although we can not for a moment conceive him with a quill behind his ear and an eyeglass in his sightless eye; and we very well know that Chaucer meant to give him his name as an "imaginative scientist."—National Review.

Stonewall Jackson's Horse.

Among the stores captured at Harper's Ferry, writes Mrs. Jackson in her "Life of Stonewall Jackson," not the least valuable was a train of cars on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, bound for Washington, and loaded with horses for the government. This was a lawful prize and was at once turned over to the Confederate army, with the exception of two horses which General Jackson purchased. Thinking that hostilities would soon be over, he selected the smaller of the two—a pretty sorrel—as a present for his wife.

General Jackson had several other horses, but preferred the little sorrel to them all, finding his gait, as he expressed it, "as easy as the rocking of a cradle." He rode this horse in nearly every battle in which he was engaged.

Fancy, as the sorrel was named, seemed almost indefatigable. One reason perhaps was that he always lay down when the command halted for a rest. His master made a pet of him, and often fed him with apples from his own hand.

After being lost for a time upon the fall of General Jackson at Chancellorsville, the horse was found by a Confederate soldier and kindly sent to the Jackson family in North Carolina. He lived many years in Lincoln county, on the farm of Dr. Morrison, father-in-law of the general.

One of the young Morrisons used to say that Old Fancy, as he was always called on the farm, "had more sense than any horse he ever saw."

He could make as good use of his mouth in lifting latches and letting down bars as a man could with his hands. One of his habits was to let himself out of his stable, and then go deliberately to the doors of all the other horses and mules, liberate each in turn, and then march off to the grain fields with them all behind him—'like a soldier' leading his command.

But he was such a pet that his misdemeanors passed for cleverness. He was often taken to county fairs, where he was an object of as much interest as one of the old heroes of the war.

He was more than thirty years of age when he died, in 1886, at the Soldiers' home in Richmond. A stuffed effigy of this old warhorse may still be seen in a glass case in the library of the home.

A Woman's True Beauty.

The line in woman from the armpit to the ankle is the one of principal beauty in the sculpture that has been extolled by nine generations of the most intellectually cultivated of our race through the varying conditions of 300 years. It is this line that is pushed inward by mechanical force till an ugly angle is produced at the hips. So wide is the departure from true beauty that it is assumed that the distortion is natural, and that the normal use of the hideous hollow is to support weight.

The outline of the front of a woman's body is also composed of similar gentle outward curves, not one inward curve from the chin over the breastbone and below. Never a corset was made that did not destroy the beauty of this line, making a depression below the bust, exaggerating its proper size and most repulsively enlarging the natural outward curve of the abdomen.

A slight sketch by an artist would show at once that the modest curves of the typical womanly form are distinctly unlike the more spirited lines of a man—one suggesting retiring beauty, the other aggressiveness and bravery.

We consider the finest development for a woman that which best illustrates her typical qualities. We consider the best dress for woman that which fails to obscure her distinctive physical features. In pictures of good costumes faithfully represented or idealized by artists we find those giving most pleasure which tend to enhance these differing characteristics.—Philadelphia Times.

Some Theatrical Advertisements.

Among the miscellaneous advertisements of a theatrical paper we notice six persons willing to supply the ladies with tights, eight with jewelry, and armor has a single paragraph devoted to it. "Wanted, a heavy man to combine emperor and cat," reads rather peculiarly, as does "For sale, an electric nose," "Leading lady wanted, to look about sixteen," is one requirement, and "Wanted, low comedian for old woman," is another.

There is a regular menagerie of performing animals for sale, including ten dogs, four elephants, four bears, two goats, two horses, a donkey and a "happy family."

Scenery is procurable in almost any quantity. "For sale, effective village street, with practicable night," "forest with good thunderstorm," "several soldiers' heads for panto," "substantial rustic bridge," "waterfall of galvanized iron with realistic foam" are all obtainable, and "drawing rooms" and "cottage interiors" are galore.—London Tit-Bits.

When John Was in Doubt.

John was a coachman who took life most seriously, and being very particular would return frequently in the course of the day to make sure that he understood the orders that had been given him in the morning. One afternoon he presented himself before his mistress and began:

"Mrs. T——, Oi'm not quite certain ez to Mr. T——'s ordher this mornin. Oi was dhroivin him to the thrain, an he noticed that the horse was lame, an he told me to do somethin to him, mum; but sure Oi don't know whither he told me to shoe him or to shoot him. Mebbe ye can till me."

A shoeing was evidently required, but the execution of the order and likewise of the horse was deferred until Mr. T—— returned.—Harper's Young People.

Saving Lots of Trouble.

Jack was observed to be vigorously hitting himself in the back with the flat of his hand, and his mamma, surprised at what he was doing, said:

"Why, Jack, what are you up to?"

"I'm saving you the trouble, mamma," he replied. "You always say I'm dusty, and I'm dusting myself by myself."

IN Washington last Wednesday afternoon the Senate and House in joint session, with Vice-President Morton presiding, went through the formal ceremony of opening the electoral returns from the States, and when the tellers had ascertained the already well-known results, the Vice President formally declared Grover Cleveland of New York duly elected President of the United States for four years, beginning March 4th, 1893, and Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois Vice-President for the same period. Then the joint Assembly dissolved. The galleries were packed during the proceedings. The totals announced by the Vice-President were: Cleveland and Stevenson 277, Harrison and Reid 145, Weaver and Field 22.

What a Pity

that so many otherwise attractive, polite and particular people afflict their friends by the foul and disagreeable odor of their breath; it is mainly caused by disordered digestion, and can be corrected by removing the cause, by using that pure medicine, Sulphur Bitters.—Health Magazine.

What the Editor Gets.

WHEN a child is born the physician is present and gets about $20 for officiating in the important event. The editor heralds the advent of the stranger and gets a cursing for making a mistake as to the sex and date of arrival.

After awhile the child becomes a man, the minister is called to perform the marriage ceremony and walks off with a $10 bill in his pocket for his trouble. The editor is again called upon to chronicle this event by drawing on his imagination to make the bride and groom the best and most respectable people in the county. His only pay is to be asked for a few extra copies of his paper to send to some absent friends.

In time the once baby, once happy groom, but now a man advanced in years, is brought down by death. Again the physician is called in and makes his bill, the undertaker is present and officiates at the funeral, and in time wants $100 for performing the last sad rites, while the editor is expected to complete the drama by holding up the deceased as a model gentleman, and one who at present is flying up the golden stairs. The probabilities are at the same time that the baby, the groom and the dead man have been so infernally stingy that he had stinted his wife and children and had never contributed one cent to the support of his local paper.

A Stage Accident.

The stage, which plys between Ukiah and Rattlesnake Grade had a sad experience with the flood Thursday night of last week.

The stage reached the Eel river about dark. A man living near the fort told the driver that he had better not attempt to stem the flood, but had better go a mile farther up where there was a good bridge.

There was but one passenger in the stage, R. W. Murphy of Cloverdale. Murphy told the driver not to take any chances, but the driver did not heed him. He struck out for the ford. When he had reached the midnle of the stream the stage tipped over, both horses were drowned and the driver has not been found yet. It is supposed he was drowned.

Murphy, as soon as he felt the stage tipping over, jumped into the stream and swam to a willow, where he held on for some time. Then he struck out and succeeded in swimming to the landing, which he reached about as much dead as alive. The United States mail bag was lost in the turbid waters of the stream.—Santa Rosa Republican.

The First Law of Nature.

This self-preservation is acknowledged to be, and people who adopt against the encroachments of disease a genuine medicinal safeguard, accredited by experience and the sanction of physicians afford a happy illustration of the wisdom of the saying, in the health they restore and continue to enjoy. Among maladies, against the growth of which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters affords efficient protection, diseases of the kidneys and bladder are fraught with the utmost peril and exhibit great obstinacy when opposed by ordinary means. The Bitters can and will subdue them. No testimony is stronger than this. Used at the outset and persistently, the best results may be expected. This medicine also eradicates liver complaint, constipation, dyspepsia, malaria, rheumatism and nervousness.

Without a doubt Simmons Liver Regulator will cure you. It has cured thousands.

Deaf for a Year

Caused by

Catarrh in the Head

Catarrh is a CONSTITUTIONAL disease, and requires a CONSTITUTIONAL REMEDY like Hood's Sarsaparilla to cure it. Read:

"Three years ago, as a result of catarrh, I entirely lost my hearing and was deaf for more than a year. I tried various things to cure it, and had several physicians attempt it, but no improvement was apparent. I could distinguish no sound. I was intending putting myself under the care of a specialist, when some one suggested that possibly Hood's Sarsaparilla would do me some good. I began taking it without the expectation of any lasting help. To my surprise and great joy I found when I had taken three bottles that my hearing was returning. I kept on till I had taken three more. It is now over a year and I can hear perfectly well. I am troubled but very little with the catarrh. I consider this a remarkable case, and cordially recommend to all who have catarrh." HERMAN HICKS, 30 Carter Street, Rochester, N. Y.

A Peculiar Accident.

Carl Dresel, the well-known viticulturist, has so far recovered from his late accident as to be able to return to his home near this place, after being confined at the residence of his brother-in-law, Chas. Bondschu in San Francisco, for ten days, and is now on the mend. The accident which befell Mr. Dresel was a most peculiar one. About two weeks ago while crossing the Bay on the steamer Donahue he hurried along the lower deck at a rapid pace in order to secure a seat on the bootblack stand. When about half the length of the boat he was tripped up by a piece of scantling which protruded from beneath a milk truck and was thrown violently forward. His forehead struck the large shaft which runs from wheel to wheel across the center of the steamer, and which is made of solid iron and almost as big around as a man's body. He was knocked unconscious by the force of the blow and lay where he fell for several minutes when he was discovered by F. T. Duhring and others who picked him up and applying restoratives succeeded in reviving him, immediately after which he had another fainting spell. Upon the arrival of the steamer in San Francisco Mr. Dresel was assisted to a carriage and taken to the residence of Mr. Bondschu and a physician called in. For several days he suffered from excruciating pains in the head, arms and other parts of his body, and for a time his injuries were considered of a very serious nature, but fortunately, as stated above, he is now convalescent.

The Weather and Crops.

The rainfall during the storm ending last Sunday was 1.75 of an inch making a total of 22.45 inches for the season to date, against 12.17 for the corresponding time last year. The heavy rainfall was followed by a white frost last Tuesday morning with the mercury two points below freezing. The nights and mornings have been so cold the past week that grain and hay is making a poor showing, while the growth of feed has been greatly retarded. Warmer weather and a clear sky would be most welcome to our farmers and stock-raisers, as the ground is to wet and cold to work, with the result that, plowing, pruning and planting is at a stand still.

Firemens' Election.

The Sonoma Volunteer Firemen have elected the following officers to serve for the ensuing term: J. M. Cheney, President; J. G. Marcy, Secretary; H. H. Granice, Treasurer; J. E. Poppe, Chief; John Ludeman, First Assistant Chief; G. A. Goess, Second Assistant Chief; Foreman Engine, L. Modini; Foreman Hose Cart, Geo. Breitenbach; Foreman Hook and Ladder Truck, George Engler. Standing Committee — Granville S. Harris, Eugene Robin and P. G. Keil. Finance Committee—Geo. Breitenbach, H. Weyl, Jr., Wm. W. Fowler. Steward, Geo. Spanning.

Looking Out for His Friends.

It is whispered that our Congressman, T. J. Geary, has his eye on a fat Consulate for one of his friends here, and another for a good Democrat in Petaluma. I have heard it rumored that A. D. Laughlin was to be the favored one here and that Johnny Rodgers of Petaluma may look forward to $4,000 a year in some foreign part.—Santa Rosa Corr. Petaluma Imprint.

Union High School.

Following is the programme rendered at the High School by the Adelphic Literary Society Friday, February 10th: Song, Society; reading, Harvey Perkins; duet, Pauline Bates and Birdie Johnson; essay, Bessie Knight; recitation, Barbara Frietchie, Chas. Champlin; song, Society. Debate, Resolved, That the system of government of the United States is better than that of any other country. Affirmative, Florence Thompson and Mabel Lowell; negative, Peter Gordenker and Annie Wadsworth.

Colgan Wins.

The Supreme Court has decided that Controler Colgan has no right to pay $5,000 to the settlers of Tia Juna. At the last Legislature a bill appropriating that sum was passed and became an Act. Colgan refused to pay the claim and judgment was rendered against him in the lower court. An appeal was taken with the result as stated.

Everybody come and have a good skate at Union Hall to-night.

You can never tell what a slight cold may lead to; it is best, therefore, to give yourself the benefit of the doubt, and cure it as soon as possible with Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A day's delay, sometimes an hour's delay, may result in serious consequences.

One more chance to spin on the wheels at Union Hall to-night.

SCHELLVILLE'S RATTLER.

What has become of Watmaugh's Tattler.

J. D. Cook of San Francisco visited friends in Schellville last Sunday.

It is rumored that D. A. Manuel has struck a rich silver mine on his place in Calistoga.

The orange trees on Jas. McMackin's place display a fine crop of golden-hued fruit.

Mrs. A. B. Lubeck of Locust Grove is visiting Mrs. George Whitley of San Francisco.

Mrs. Merriam of this place, who fell from her tricycle last Fall and received a severe sprain, is still confined to the house.

During the recent storm the Sonoma Creek at Embarcadero was very high. In several places farms were flooded in that vicinity.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather a number of the Schellvillians were unable to attend the Mechanics' Fair on Saturday last.

Quite a number of the inhabitants of this busy burg intend taking in the grand ball to be given by the "Ten Pin Social Club" on the 22nd inst.

Contractors from Santa Rosa are engaged in elevating the new bridge at Embarcadero, which crosses Sonoma Creek. This was one of Cady's bridges and it was built too low.

FORTY-NINER.

GLEN ELLEN.

B. D. Alexander, Kenwood's newly-elected Mayor, was in town last Wednesday.

The long continued heavy rains have raised the creek above high water mark of previous years.

The liberal firm of Kohler & Frohling are offering fine varieties of phylloxera-proof cuttings free of charge to the vineyard men in this vicinity.

A Warning to Delinquents.

The wind bloweth,
The water floweth,
The farmer soweth,
The subscriber oweth,
And the Lord knoweth
That we are in need of our dues.
So try and be cunning,
And quick "come a-running,"
Ere we "go a-gunning;"
We're not "a-funning,"
This thing of dunning
Would give us the everlasting blues.

Prof. J. R. Watson of Guerneville, who has many friends in Sonoma Valley, was one of the passengers on the train ot the Guerneville Branch of the San Francisco and North Pacific Railway, which met with an accident near Korbel's Station on Friday morning of last week. The accident was caused by a washout. No one was seriously hurt. Mr. Watson had one of his hands bruised and President Abbey of the Great Eastern Quicksilver Mine was rendered insensible by a blow on the head. Had the train been going at a rapid rate the result might have been more serious. No fault is attached to the employees of the road, as the washout was of such a nature that it could not be seen—a sort of a tunnel as it were—and the weight of the train caused the track to sink. The engine passed over safely, but the truck went down. The passenger car ran into that and brought up with a jolt that made it very lively and alarming for the passengers. With the shock the coupling broke and the engine slid for fifty feet along the track. The truck and passenger car was ditched and wrecked.

It is generally considered that the storm which at one time threatened to break upon the enlarged domestic circle has blown over.

Something frightened his Electioneer and he broke away and went down the hill at a 2:03¼ gait. It was not long before the majority of the cart grew tired of the race and parted company from the horse. The loss will be about $50. The professor had recently had his cart overhauled and nicely painted.

A Little Girl's Experience in a Lighthouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of the Gov Lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter, four years old. Last April she was taken down with Measles, followed with a dreadful Cough and turning into a fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones." Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at Ed. Wegner's Drugstore.

Under the direction of the forestry division of the department of agriculture experiments to produce rainfall by the explosion of dynamite are being made. The theory that rain may be produced by explosives is based largely on the fact that nearly all the great batties of this century have been followed quite shortly by rain.

DYSPEPSIA.

Is that misery experienced when we suddenly become aware that we possess a diabolical arrangement called a stomach. The stomach is the reservoir from which every fibre and tissue must be nourished, and any trouble with it is soon felt throughout the whole system. Among a dozen dyspeptics no two will have the same predominant symptoms. Dyspeptics of active mental power and a bilious temperament are subject to Sick Headache; those, fleshy and phlegmatic have Constipation, while the thin and nervous are abandoned to gloomy forebodings. Some dyspeptics are wonderfully forgetful; others have great irritability of temper.

Whatever form Dyspepsia may take, one thing is certain,

The underlying cause is in the LIVER, and one thing more is equally certain, no one will remain a dyspeptic who will

It will correct Acidity of the Stomach, Expel foul gases, Allay Irritation, Assist Digestion, and, at the same time

Start the Liver to working, when all other troubles soon disappear.

"My wife was a confirmed dyspeptic. Some three years ago by the advice of Dr. Steiner, of Augusta, she was induced to try Simmons Liver Regulator. I feel grateful for the relief it has given her, and may all who read this and are afflicted in any way, whether chronic or otherwise, use Simmons Liver Regulator and I feel confident health will be restored to all who will be advised."—WM. A Unique Log Hauler.

One of the most unique mechanical devices resorted to is that for inclined and horizontal log hauling at a Hudson river paper pulp mills. The arrangement consists of an endless detached chain running in a recess at the bottom of a trough, having special links with log teeth every five feet, and passing over sprocket wheels whose centers are 200 feet apart. The head wheel is twenty-five feet above the foot wheel, and the head end of the chain swings and can be raised or lowered by means of a small winch to suit the depth of the water.

The logs are floated to the haulup, and, as they come around the foot wheel, are caught on the teeth of the chain and carried up the incline at the rate of 125 feet a minute. On arriving at the top they are discharged into a horizontal log haul, having head and foot wheels nearly 600 feet apart, the whole being similarly constructed to the inclined haul—the return chain supported by toothed idlers—and a deflecting piece is placed across the horizontal conveyer, by which the logs, elevated by the chain, are thrown out of the trough and rolled over the side upon long skids.

Great saving of time and cost is thus effected, twenty-five horse-power being employed, though some of the logs are of immense size.—New York Sun.

About Receiving Visitors.

The latest story that is told about Phillips Brooks is to the effect that quite recently, being engaged in work, he left orders with the servants that on no account was he to be interrupted. But shortly after he had retired to his study the door bell rang and a friend from New York sought admittance — Stockbroker Nichols, who had been a classmate of Bishop Brooks in college. This early caller did not fancy the idea of being turned away, and while he was remonstrating with the servant, lo and behold, Phillips Brooks emerged from his study, welcomed the visitor with open arms, bade him enter and talked with him an hour or so. The servant felt deeply mortified and made bitter complaint to the bishop after the caller had departed.

"I remember distinctly," said the servant, "that you told me that you would be so busy that you wouldn't see the Angel Gabriel if he called."

"Yes," answered the bishop, "I did say that, and I meant it. But there's all the difference in the world between Gabriel and my friend Nichols. I'm bound to see Gabriel anyway in the next world, but as there is some doubt about my seeing Nichols there it was only right that I should see him here, when he took the trouble to call upon me."—Chicago News.

Tips and Attendance.

A charge for attendance is made in some restaurants and other places, but no pleasant looks will follow the departing guest if he should omit to remember the person or persons who attended him. One morning when the rosy cheeked maid brought us our bills at the little hotel where we passed the night, my friend, observing a charge for "attendance," remarked:

"Well, Lizzie, does that mean you?"

"No, sir, it don't," was the answer, with a becoming blush and an air of self consciousness that was delicious.

Needless to say that Lizzie was a shilling richer a moment later. The "tip" is expected every time; but the traveler should bear in mind that it need not be a large one. A penny or twopence will be gratefully received, where the average American at home would never think of offering less than five or ten cents.—London Cor. New York Tribune.

When Coal Was First Dug in England.

It was to supply the wants of smiths and lime burners that English coal began to be systematically dug, about A. D. 1200. This mineral fuel suited the requirements of their crafts even better than wood. An unwonted and widespread demand for fuel for these purposes doubtless sprang up at this period, in connection with the numerous feudal castles and ecclesiastical buildings which were being erected throughout the kingdom. Not only were smiths and lime burners the sole patrons of coal at this early stage, but for a long time subsequently they continued to be its principal consumers.—Contemporary Review.

While Examining a Throat.

The practice common in Europe of holding a glass plate between the physician and his patient while examining the throat is recommended. By this means the lodgment of particles of the secretion coughed from the throat upon the face, beard or person of the physician, which might be a source of danger to the latter or be conveyed to other patients, is avoided.—Exchange.

How Cardinals Exercise.

The etiquette of Rome forbids a cardinal to be seen on foot in the streets; he must always drive, or if he wants walking exercise must take it either by pacing in a private garden or else take his carriage some way outside the walls, and let it wait for him until his walk is over.—Rome Letter.

ODD MISTAKES OF NOVELISTS.

Writers of Thrilling Love Stories Often Get Mixed in Their Details.

The average reader who skims over the last railroad novel is not likely to notice the many faults in the flimsy construction of the plot.

But I often smile at the maidens that wander in "lonely woods" at unearthly hours of night, always clad in "a soft, white, clinging gown." Now every girl knows that the average maiden is too much afraid of tramps and snakes to wander in "lonely woods." And then she is not "pale, but unspeakably lovely," after such a tramp. No; an ordinary girl who spends half a night in a "mossy" but damp couch will wander home in the morning full of mud and cockle burs, her bangs as straight as a cable on an avenue car line and herself as cross as a Seventh street policeman on Saturday evening.

Another odd thing is the way some pen pushers get mixed in their weather reports. Some begin a chapter at dawn, there are a few moments' conversation, and then the "sun sets in lurid banks behind the distant, empurpled mountains."

There is one novel, by The Duchess, I think, in which the chapter opens with "a thick, drizzling mist sifting down and enfolding the landscape," and in a few moments the hero is springing out of a window into the "soft, mellow moonlight." Evidently the weather possessed as many phases as Marshall Wilder's transformation tableaux.

There is one song and it is a sweet one, too that furnishes a brilliant example. In "Alice, Where Art Thou?" one verse speaks of the "silver rain falling," while the first one announces that the "moon shines bright," and that "its rays tinge the forest." These seem, on ordinary occasions, slightly contradictory statements.

I have often wondered how long some girls could go sans meals, sans head, sans everything, for, judging by some of the writers, neither the hero nor the heroine is subject to any necessity of nature. Love is an excellent thing, a "pearl of great price." But a man in a dirty collar and no breakfast in his stomach doesn't feel like courting the girl who looks as limp as the man who bet his last dollar on Sullivan and went home to find his wife sick and the grocer's boy sitting on the stoop with a six months' bill.

The old fashioned novelist is played out; the old fashioned hero has been cremated, and the old fashioned heroine sits in lonely solitude, forgotten by the busy throng. The wasp waist, the lily flower that fainted at every breath has passed slowly away.

May she rest in peace! And in her place is the strong, healthy, rosy cheeked, independent girl, who can drive her horse and check her trunks with equal ease and fascinating grace. Blood and bounding health sparkle from every rounding curve, and the dainty, simpering, lackadaisical maiden of blushes, tremors and sighs dwells in innocuous desuetude, let us hope, forever.

There let her rest, by the side of the hero with the "short sword and dark, gloomy eyes," who rode about on a borrowed horse and whose only object was to disturb the peace of the commonwealth. Gone are the perfect heroes, the faultless heroines, and in their place reign men and women—flesh and blood—with the passions that sink them to the brute and elevate them to the divinity.—Washington Post.

Many Kinds of Monkeys.

The ordinary reader hardly realizes how many varieties of monkeys exist. We hear of monkeys in the Indies with reddish brown bodies, black heads and faces of a sky blue. There are monkeys with white eyelids, and green monkeys to be found on the African continent and Cape de Verde islands. The howlers, which inhabit South America, are large and fierce, and travelers describe their yells as absolutely appalling. So dreadful is the sound of their growlings and roarings that one would imagine that all the beasts of the forests had gathered together for a battle. These creatures are so fierce that even the most skillful and adventurous trainer is unwilling to teach them tricks.—Harper's Young People.

"German Syrup"

A Germ Disease.

The majority of well-read physicians now believe that Consumption is a germ disease. In other words, instead of being in the constitution itself it is caused by innumerable small creatures living in the lungs having no business there and eating them away as caterpillars do the leaves of trees. The phlegm that is coughed up is those parts of the lungs which have been gnawed off and destroyed. These little bacilli, as the germs are called, are too small to be seen with the naked eye, but they are very much alive just the same, and enter the body in our food, in the air we breathe, and through the pores of the skin. Thence they get into the blood and finally arrive at the lungs where they fasten and increase with frightful rapidity. Then German Syrup comes in, loosens them, kills them, expells them, heals the places they leave, and so nourish and soothe that, in a short time consumptives become germ-proof and well.

My wife was troubled with nervousness about one year before she took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, and at that time had very severe attacks of spasm, convulsion, and pains in different parts of the body; when in this state her lower jaws would act violently and set sometimes, bite her tongue, breathe heavily, then short, then seemed to stop entirely, get a wild look in her eyes and rolling around, then stop sometimes; it would take two men to hold her in bed, otherwise her body would cramp and be so for two hours. She took but two bottles of the Nerve Tonic, which cured her entirely of all these torments, which myself and wife gladly testify it truly had the desired effect D. S. MCGILLIS.

Mrs. Ester Devilbiss, 354 S. Tenth street, San Jose, Cal., writes, October 1892: Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic has indeed done wonders in my part of the country. There has been bought in my neighborhood over $75 worth.

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been so near the original sample as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well I that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving can give you but a faint idea of the exquisite original, which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and flung aside with a triumphant coo. The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite engraving is one of the greatest painting of Ida Waugh, the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life, are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Pansies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

"I'M A DAISY."

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send 10 cents for a specimen copy.

NAGLE IN COURT.

In the Justice's Court of Santa Rosa Township, Sonoma County, California.

J. W. RAGSDALE, Plaintiff, vs. F. G. NAGLE, Defendant.

The plaintiff for cause of action against the defendant, alleges: That on the 16th day of November, 1888, said defendant, F. G. Nagle, received from G. W. Call the sum of one hundred (100) dollars, the property of the Sonoma County Abstract Bureau; that of said money said defendant, Nagle, returned to said Bureau the sum of $20 only, and retained, and ever since has retained, the balance of said $100, to-wit, $80, for his own use, and that no part of said $80 has ever been paid; that said Bureau assigned said claim to plaintiff.

For a further and separate cause of action plaintiff alleges: That defendant is indebted to plaintiff in the sum of $80 for money had and received from G. W. Call, November 16th, 1888, for the use and benefit of the Sonoma County Abstract Bureau, which claim has been assigned to the plaintiff, and that no part of the same has ever been paid.

Wherefore, plaintiff prays for a judgment against defendant for the sum of $80 and costs.

RUTLEDGE & PRESSLEY, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

Dec. 9, 1891, complaint filed, summons issued and served. Dec. 15 default and judgment entered against defendant for $80 and costs. Dec. 16th, Nagle pays judgment.
